Chapter 1 by Story Wars

If you are reading this read carefully I don't have time to explain . They are breaking through my doors eventually they will find me .

In time to come they will find you so listen carefully and do as I say

Chapter 2 by Hop

Is this is a joke ?

Subject #2 thought as he tore up the letter on his mail pod

He looked around his house , trying to remember where the window was.

It was a small yet elegantly designed , with walls and furniture that would make kings jealous.

"And yet it's illegal to have more than windows";"It's not like you can hide what's happening outside"

Finally finding it. He gazed outside.

"Still nothing "

Empty building and empty streets were what his eyes could see.

The whole city has cleared in fear of an earthquake but he decided to stay

City #2 , like all cities was under the control of the governess. Nothing happened until she approved,he could still remember the day his toilet door wouldn't open because of possible dangers,not to him of course

"It is nice to not be under any rules"

Somebody must have thought it would have been fun to leave that letter.

He did feel terribly lonely and even after he tore up the letter he couldn't bare to get rid of it.

It was a painful reminder that he isn't alone

He still hadn't left the house

Today he will.

He was quick to rise

Quick to get ready

He always was

Being Late was an offense

The Scars on his arm wouldn't let him forget that

His hand touched the door handle.

Pain seared through his palm

The handle was scorching hot

Confused and in pain

he tried again

If the first attempt was bad this was worse

he stared in disbelief as he looked at his burnt hands

On the floor lay a piece of the letter he had torn

"You will be trapped in your home, You will burn"

His new found happiness at the thought of freedom turned into fear

As he frantically started searching for the remains of the letter

He had hoped this was a joke but his hopes were dashed

His emotions were sinking in as he realized the letter had torn up his life, yesterday
